THE "PRECEDENT" CONTROVERSY.

The chapter on precedents published in yesterday's TIMES so completely staggered the Colonist that it has withdrawn from the controversy. From the beginning it was evident that our contemporary was perfectly at sea on a subject which it endeavored to make the public believe it was thoroughly familiar with. First, it was astray as to the MACDONALD-SICOTTE-DORION governments. Its assertions regarding the general election of 1863 and the memorable crisis of 1864 were the reverse of being correct. But the most ridiculous of its many stupid, dense blunders was the asseveration that the Globe was the organ of the JOHN SANDFIELD MACDONALD government in Ontario during the crisis of 1871 and the down-fall of that notorious "patent combination" concern. With supreme impudence, that is positively refreshing, it claims that its contentions throughout were correct. Its pertinacity in this respect is wonderful. Evidently its ethics are that once having made an assertion, be it right or wrong, it will cling to that statement. Our contempory is bound to die "gamely." Its attitude on the situation of affairs in Quebec, as shown by the extracts in yesterday's issue of THE TIMES, as compared with its utterances after the local elections in this province in 1882, demonstrated the fact that the Colonist's memory failed it; that it had maintained its record for inconsistency, unreliability and a total disregard of the truth and a course it had previously advocated. It is a new doctrine to preach that one code of constitutional practice and usage prevails here and another in the east and in England. Squirm and wriggle as the organ may, THE TIMES has taught it a lesson that should keep it within the limits of truth and honesty in future discussions. The matter from the first was a trifling one certainly, and had our contemporary taken the opportunity to post itself, by reading up Canadian history correctly it would not have perpetrated the egregious blunders in which it has been detected by THE TIMES.

In connection with this discussion it may not be amiss to state that the subject of "precedents" is being somewhat tropically handled by the eastern press, extending as far even as to Halifax, Nova Scotia. The "boodle" press, like unto its prototype of the Colonist in this province, advises the Ross government to cling to office; the opposition press quotes precedents for the guidance of those concerned in the crisis, and calmly but confidently awaits the inevitable result which is certain to take place in Quebec within a few weeks.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

PORT MOODY'S INCORPORATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES:

SIR:—In last Monday's issue of THE TIMES I read an account of the incorporation meeting at Port Moody, which account is substantially correct, but perhaps a little mildly drawn. I beg to say a few words myself on the subject. The project of the promoters of the incorporation scheme I fully agree with. The object is to take advantage of the depression in Vancouver, get Port Moody incorporated as soon as possible, borrow a large sum of money and expend it on improvements,—all at once if you will, so as to make as big a show as possible. Thus it is thought a boom in Port Moody could be started, and thereby a great many of the Vancouver people, and others, would be drawn to the real terminus. I am told preliminary arrangements for a large loan are already made. So far, I endorse all. But unfortunately the promoters, despairing of success by fair means, have seen fit to proceed in such a partial and unfair manner that right-thinking men are turned away in disgust. Why, sir, though largely interested and living in the place, I am not aware who signed the petition for incorporation; or indeed even if a petition has been signed and sent to the government. This is all wrong. In matters of public business everything should be done above board. The meeting should, in the first instance, have been called by notice in a newspaper and at least one week in advance.

Port Moody, Nov. 4, '86. OBSERVER.

THE OLD, OLD STORY.

The telegraph wires are in their normal condition to-day, and we are deprived of our dispatches. This sort of thing has become terribly monotonous of late, but we see no help for it so long as we are served by wires strung on tree limbs through the dense forests of Washington Territory. The immediate cause to-day is said to be falling trees on the new postal line which is under construction south of the boundary.

The Executive committee of the social federation of London has decided to hold the contemplated procession on lord mayor's day, Nov. 9, in spite of the warning of the police. The leaders estimate that 15,000 persons will take part in the demonstration. Champion one of the leaders, has written a letter to the chief of police saying that if he cannot keep paces the socialists themselves will be prepared to maintain order provided they be given the control of the police.

Tables at entertainments have been set so long in the horseshoe style that some of the more select ones are going to have them laid square, with mirrors in centre and the dishes served a la russe, so the gay party can contemplate themselves as they feed and quaff the flowing bowl.

IRELAND'S AFFAIRS.

Lord Churchill's Speech at Bradford—Encouraging Reports from Ireland.

Home Rule not to be Granted—The Government's Programme.

In his speech at Bradford on the 26th ultimo, of which the following is a brief epitome, Lord Randolph Churchill is reported to have said that the official accounts reaching the government of the social condition and prospects of Ireland are of an encouraging character. There is a good harvest and a marked recovery in prices, and from all we can learn, though accurate information is difficult to obtain, rents are being fairly paid throughout the country. Landlords have helped greatly to lessen the difficulty of the crisis. Though they belong to a body of men that have never met with over much justice in England and therefore were justified in standing out for their complete rights and the strict letter of the law, they have generally made very large reductions and the government is immensely indebted to them for the generous spirit they have displayed. The Irish tenants also have co-operated in a signal manner toward the restoration of order. The separatists in the House of Commons predicted that a terrible time was coming in Ireland. Mr. Parnell in a begging letter implored American dollars in order to prevent the wholesale extermination of the Irish. Nothing of the kind has occurred or is likely to occur, although there are still isolated districts in Ireland where terror and crime are rampant which may call for special treatment. With this exception there is a marked decrease in crime and disorder. Of course I cannot speak with absolute confidence of the future, nor say whether we shall be able to pass the winter without calling upon Parliament for a measure to assist in the execution of the law, but on the whole, I think Ireland is not in nearly so bad a state as might reasonably be expected. The people are rapidly appreciating the full significance of

and will gradually shape their political and social action in accordance therewith. If the Unionists firmly follow up the victory they have gained I think we may conclude without any doubt or hesitation that the question of the maintenance of the union is settled for at least two generations.

On the questions of foreign affairs, I have nothing to add or detract from my Dartford speech, first, because Lord Salisbury, at the Lord Mayor's banquet, gave his opinions thereon; and second, because I have been, during my holidays isolated from knowledge of official affairs, not as some silly, hysterical people suppose, in close contact with European statesmen. The speaker proceeded to indulge in lively banter over what we called the sick condition of the Liberal party. He said the party was so sick that the government doubted whether it had any opponent at all. He ridiculed their previous complaint that he had stolen their programme. Why their programme? he asked. They had been in office six years and had not attempted to carry a single item of it. All he could say was that the Dartford programme was simply an elaboration of

and with the exception of two items dealing with tithes and procedure in parliament, consists of exactly what the Conservatives hoped to pass when last in office. "We were prevented from so doing because Mr. Gladstone, by a manoeuvre most artful and unprincipled, turned us out of power. Now Gladstone is out, and the fact that the Liberals know that they cannot now prevent us from carrying out our programme is what makes them so mad and malevolent." While denying that the government had been converted to the "three acres and a cow" policy, he said that they had always favored extensive land reform, and would endeavor to produce a genuine and necessary measure which, if it failed to go the length of Jesse Collings's desire, would yet be most too good and valuable to be strongly resisted by the party. He humorously explained the Daily News Home Rule statement as an article which Lucy had prepared for the columns of Punch, but inadvertently inserted it in the News. He thought this a "Lucy'd" explanation. (Roars of laughter.) Three things he was able to state with certainty. First, the government did not intend to grant Home Rule to Ireland; second, it did not intend to deal with third, it did not mean to be hurried or hasty in that dealing. He asked that earnest attention be given to his remarks on procedure. He said: "I wish to fully and frankly admit that I have changed my mind on the question of the power of closing debate. When both great parties of the State firmly opposed the repeal of the Union and Parnellite obstruction, the Conservatives looked upon closure as a startling and unneeded protection. They may have been wrong, but what we now deal with is an absolute change in the state of affairs, since the Radical separatists deliberately tolerate and assist the obstruction tactics of the enlarged body of Parnellites pledged not to allow any legislation until Home Rule is granted. We therefore feel certain of your hearty support in changing our minds with the altered circumstances." He concluded with an earnest appeal to the country to assist the Government in their high purpose of enabling Parliament to carry out the will of the people, and sat down amid vociferous cheering.

THE PHONOPLEX.

The Latest Telegraphic Invention of the Great Electrician Edison.

Electric service has of late been making great progress. The newest invention in telegraphy is the phonoplex, which was only a few months ago patented by the eminent electrician, Edison. It is now finding a place in all the telegraph offices of the United States, and promises to be a boon to the telegraph operators, both on account of its simplicity and the ease with which messages may be transmitted and received, and the first to adopt it in Canada was the Canadian Pacific Telegraph Company, and the instrument in use in this city was described to a Free Press reporter by the manager, Mr. Harry Bott, this morning. From Ottawa to Montreal on the C. P. R. line there are some twenty-four stations, all using a single wire by means of the phonoplex, this one wire running through each of these stations. Messages may be transmitted from any one of these stations to any other at the same time, without the least interference. That is, the whole of the twenty-four stations may be in simultaneous communication with one another on the single wire. But that is not all. The "Morse" instrument may also be worked upon the line by the use of an instrument called the "condenser," which for an infinitively short space of time retains the message transmitted by the "phonoplex," which, as its name suggests is an application of the telephone principle to telegraphy: It consists of a hollow column or tube of brass, within which is placed a horse shoe magnet with the bobbins facing the diaphragm. The whole rests upon a wooden base. At the lower end of the magnet there is a rack and a pinion, by means of which it can be adjusted with reference to the diaphragm. A screw pin, with a nut and binder at the top is attached to the centre of the diaphragm. Encircling the pin loosely is a split, hardened steel ring which rests upon the diaphragm. Then the electric current in its passage is snapped by the attraction of the momentary current in the magnet, it throws the ring violently against the stop nuts and produces a sharp click, far louder than that from the ordinary Morse sounder. The ring has a pin projecting from its side that passes between two prongs, which, while permitting free up and down motion, prevents the ring from turning and altering the sound. It may here be mentioned that this phonoplex is making great headway both on the American continent and in Europe. It is in operation on the Canadian Pacific line, the Baltimore and Ohio company's lines, and will shortly be put into operation on the Grand Trunk.

Three or four cells only are required by the local battery "phone" for a distance of between two or three hundred miles. The simplicity of the instrument and the ease with which it is worked will be strong points in its favor, and it will doubtlessly ere long find a place in every telegraph office.

A HIGHLANDMAN'S PRAYER.

Good and Gracious Providence bless the MacTonalds and all the MacTonalds' children for a thousand years lang syne. Be graciously pleased to send us rivers of whiskeys and mountains of potatoes, and breads and sheeces so big as the hills of Strathmore, and likewise furthermore, send us floods of water so that there may be grass plenty for man and beast, and moreover likewise nevertheless send us tons of tombacco, and sneeshum so numerous as the sess on the sand shore; and also, O Lord, be sure to send us swords and pistols numerous to kill the McTavishes and Macfairsons. Tam them forevermore lang syne. Bless the wee stirk and make her a big coo by next Martimas, and put the strength of Sanapson into Tugal's arm, and make them bring forth kails and corn and lang kaib and corn prodigious. PREMIER MOWAT.

The Toronto Globe of the 30th ult., contains the full text of the Hon. Oliver Mowat's open letter to the Rev. G. M. Milligan, of Toronto. It occupies nine columns of closely printed matter. It is a very able exhaustive document. Mr. Mowat stoutly denies that his government is subservient to Roman Catholic influence, or that the public institutions of Ontario have been subordinate to the Church of Rome. He says: "As to truckling to the Church of Rome, I emphatically deny that there has been any truckling on the part of myself or the government of which I have been for fourteen years the head, and for all of whose acts I am responsible. It has been my duty as a premier in a mixed community to be fair to that church and to all churches, and I have found it perfectly practicable to be fair to the Roman Catholics, without ceasing in principle or practice to be a Protestant and a Presbyterian. Without truckling to anybody, I have, to the best of my judgment, been fair to all and no more than fair to the Roman Catholics."

The Ottawa Citizen of Monday, under the heading "No General Election," says editorially: "The cabinet sat on Saturday from 2 p. m. to 6:30, and we have the highest authority for stating that the question of a general election was not discussed by the cabinet, much less any decision arrived at."

LONDON'S GOSSIP.

Gladstone and the Leadership of the Liberals—Its Policy.

A Literary Controversy—A Club for Ladies—Gossipy Items.

The suggestion of a correspondent in the Daily News that Mr. Gladstone should be asked to retire from the leadership of the Liberal party, cables a press correspondent, has provoked a storm of replies, indignantly repudiating such an unwise and ungrateful course. Mr. Gladstone has clearly indicated his share in politics to be confined strictly to the Irish question. It is well known to the best informed here that the actual leaders of the party will be Mr. John Morley and Sir William Vernon Harcourt. Mr. Morley's speech at Leeds will, I learn, be of the greatest importance as outlining the Liberal policy of the immediate future. He has been engaged in the preparation of it for some time past.

CHURCHILL SUPPORTED.

Right Hon. W. H. Smith, Secretary of War, and Lord Randolph Churchill's old enemy, speaking last night, gave remarkable support to Lord Randolph Churchill's recent programme. It would not surprise his audience, he said, to hear that Her Majesty's Government perfectly agreed. When Lord Salisbury spoke he spoke for his cabinet; when Lord Randolph Churchill spoke he did so with the full knowledge, assent and consent of all his colleagues in the cabinet. When they ceased to be united they would cease to remain in the Government.

THE GOSSE CONTROVERSY.

The discussion aroused by the Quarterly Review article on Mr. Edmund Gosse, which has been creating so much excitement in literary circles, has now run its course. Mr. Churton Collins replies very severely this week in the Anthenaeum to Mr. Gosse's rejoinder to the first attack, utterly repudiating the charge of malicious personal motives. The outcome of the articles and correspondence may be said to be that many inaccuracies, some of them serious, have been exposed in Mr. Gosse's book, "from Shakespeare to Pope." His reputation as a literary scholar has suffered to that extent. Also that the reviewers of the Times, Athenaeum, Saturday Review and Academy are denounced for not having pointed out one of Mr. Gosse's original errors, but received the work with almost unbroken praise. On the other hand, the Quarterly Review is considered to have greatly lessened the value of his article by overdoing his invective and almost abuse. I am informed that Mr. Gosse took the natural and dignified step of placing his resignation in the hands of the authorities of Trinity College, and it was instantly declined. Mr. Gosse has reprinted his defence from the Athenaeum in an attractive pamphlet form. If, as is believed by many, that log rolling exists to any extent in English letters, they will have received a severe blow from this unfortunate affair.

I learn that Prince Alexander late of Bulgaria, is expected in London next spring, and already the leaders of society are planning fetes which will make him the lion of the season.

There is talk of establishing in London a club for ladies on the model of the university clubs.

Herbert Spencer has recovered from his long illness, and is now able to work a little daily.

Delegates of the Clarendon press are making arrangements for the publication of volumes of selections from the miscellaneous works of the late Mark Pattison.

Jane Margaret Strickland, the only survivor of several clever sisters of that name, is writing a memoir of Agnes Strickland, to be published by Blackwood.

An English translation of "Studies in religious History," by Renan, will be published by Bentley.

NEW LIBERAL PROGRAMME.

The New Liberal Programme, edited by Andrew Reid, and to be published by Swan, will contain articles by Labouchere, Sir Wilfred Lawson, Lord Kilcourse, Lord Thurlow, T. Burt, Sir E. Reed, W. Summers and others, expressing the views of the future policy of the Gladstonian Liberals.

Charles Marwin will publish next week, through Allen, a pamphlet called "The Coming Deluge of Russian Petroleum."

Bell will issue early next year a new edition of Algernon Stedman's "Oxford Social and Intellectual." The book will be almost entirely rewritten. The chapters on examinations will be contributed by Oxford men of special knowledge.

William Ingelow, a brother of Jean Ingelow, with whom she lived for many years past, died suddenly last Sunday night.

The widow of Hobart Pasha has edited his "Sketches of My Life," which will be published by the Longmans.

RECOVERING.

The carpenter Graham, who fell from the third story of Mr. Heathorn's building a couple of weeks since, and whose escape from immediate death was little short of a miracle, under the careful nursing of a devoted wife and the treatment given in St. Joseph's hospital is slowly but surely recovering. It will be many months ere he is able to resume work. Mrs. A. J. Smith—the genuine warm hearted, sympathetic woman that she is—has undertaken the not altogether pleasant task of appealing to a generous community for aid in behalf of the sufferer whose means of livelihood was cut off by the accident. The appeal is being responded to in a commendable spirit.

A MERCENARY PRESS.

We heartily agree with a weekly contemporary that a timid, time-serving journal is a curse to a community. A press whose utterances are shaped by the amount of boodle it can secure, or whose "influence" on public opinion is directed in favor of the side that contributes the most money is also equally objectionable and quite as deserving of the contempt of honest men. Our contemporary, as he is well aware, does not need to look far abroad for examples of both kind.

STOLEN FURS.

During the smash-up at New Westminster junction in July, a bale of furs was stolen from one of the cars, and to-day one of the railway officials has been making invent galloon to ascertain if they had been sold to dealers in this city. He failed to discover any trace of them, and is of opinion that they have not yet reached Victoria. The thief is believed to be a Chinaman.

TUESDAY'S ELECTIONS.

Substantial Gains made by the Republicans in the House of Representatives.

The Seattle Post-Intelligencer of this (Saturday) morning says: While the Republicans have made substantial and gratifying gains over their present strength in the House of Representatives, they have lost considerably in the Senate—their loss being sufficient to endanger their control of that body. Several of the Legislatures which are to choose United States Senators are so close that it will require the official count to determine the majority on joint ballot, and if all such are conceded to the Democrats, the Senate will be almost evenly divided between the two great parties. At the beginning of the last session of Congress the Senate consisted of forty-two Republicans, including Mahone and Riddleberger, and thirty-four Democrats. The death of Senator Miller, of California, and the appointment of Senator Hearst, reduced the Republican strength to forty-one and increased that of the Democrats to thirty-five. At the end of the next session Senator Mahone will give place to John W. Daniel, Democrat, which will further reduce the Republican and increase the Democrat strength, leaving the proportion forty to thirty-six. It is conceded that the California Legislature will be Democratic on joint ballot, and the former seat of Senator Miller will continue to be filled by a Democrat. The New Jersey Legislature is claimed by the Democrats. The Indiana Legislature is also doubtful, but the latest returns indicate that it will be Democratic on joint ballot by two majority. The only gain which has been made by the Republicans is in Nevada, where a Republican Legislature has unquestionably been elected. The Connecticut Legislature is Republican and will return a Republican. Deleware will send a Democrat to succeed Gray, Florida a Democrat to succeed Jones, Maine a Republican to succeed Hale, Massachusetts a Republican to succeed Dawes, Michigan a Republican to succeed Conger, Minnesota a Republican to succeed McMillan, Mississippi a Democrat to succeed George, Missouri a Democrat to succeed Cockrell, Nebraska a Republican to succeed Van Wyck, New York a Republican to succeed Miller, Pennsylvania a Republican to succeed Mitchell, Rhode Island a Republican to succeed Whitthorne, Texas a Democrat to succeed Maxey, and West Virginia a Democrat to succeed Camden. The Senate will therefore, probably stand at the first session of the next Congress, thirty-nine Republicans and thirty-seven Democrats. This slight Republican majority, it must be remembered, includes Senator Riddleberger, of Virginia, who was elected as a Readjuster, and though counted as a Republican refuses to affiliate with the other Republican Senators and is as liable to vote with the Democrats as with the Republicans. With his vote cast with those of the Democrats, the Senate will be a tie, and neither party will be able to pass a partisan measure. With the Republican grasp upon the Senate so slight and the Democratic grasp upon the House no stronger, it may readily be believed that the next Congress will not be able to enact any legislation which meets with the united opposition of either party. Possibly this even division between the parties may make the speedy admission of Washington and Dakota more probable. With such narrow majorities in both houses anything is liable to happen, and the country may at least expect two interesting sessions.

A BOLD ROBBERY.

A Well Known Victoria Lady Has a Pistol Pointed at Her Head in Toronto by a Night Marauder.

A daring robbery took place at the residence of Mr. R. E. Kingsford, barrister, Murray street, Toronto, a few nights since, the particulars of which, so far as known to us, have not appeared in any of the Toronto papers. Mrs. J. Roland Hett, in writing to her husband in this city, gives a lucid account of the daring affair. She says that a few nights ago, while partially asleep she fancied that there were strange movements at her door, in the hall of the house. Listening, she became convinced that there was some one in the hall, and calling out if it was Mr. Kingsford, and getting an answer in the affirmative, from a voice not unlike that of Mr. Kingsford's, but somewhat gruff, she rested for a time. A few minutes later on she became aware of the presence of a stranger in her room. On arising from her reclining position she beheld a man with his hand resting on a table, quite close to her bed, with a revolver in his hand pointing at her head. Mrs. Hett, believing "discretion the better part of valor" concluded to remain quiet and laid herself down again. The intruder did not speak to her, and in a few seconds he withdrew. On his doing so Mrs. Hett jumped out of bed, bolted the door and on it, from the inside, knocked so vehemently that Mrs. Kingsford, who was sleeping with one of her children in an adjoining room speedily came to Mrs. Hett's relief. The two ladies then turned on the gas and made a thorough search of the room; but no trace could be found of the stranger, nor that anything had been extracted. They then crossed the hall to enter Mr. Kingsford's room and alarm him. Here they found a couple of masked men, one of whom had a revolver with a bead drawn on Mr. Kingsford's head. On noticing the ladies entering he asked them not to be alarmed, for the intruders were "friends" of his. The ladies at once returned to their rooms. In the meantime Mr. Kingsford's pockets had been rifled and all the money found therein taken possession of. He then asked them to withdraw without annoying or interfering with the ladies across the hall, on entering any of the rooms, especially that occupied by Mrs. Hett. Mr. Kingsford at this time did not know that the robbers had ransacked Mrs. Hett's room before entering his. Supposing that the burglars had withdrawn Mrs. Kingsford and Mrs. Hett came out of the room, but on seeing the unwelcome visitors they became greatly alarmed, on noticing which the burglars hastened about leaving. The affair was placed in the hands of the police. Mr. Kingsford is confident he can identify the disturbers of his house. The exact extent of the raid is not yet known.

THE ANCON.

Capt. Dan Morrison reports the steamship Ancon having completed necessary repairs so as to enable her to leave for San Francisco to-night some time. She has been lying in Esquimalt harbor for some days, being caulked, &c. We will probably not see anything more of this steamship till next spring.

THE ROUND ROBIN.

The "muddler and mixer" on precedents of the Colonist a couple of mornings since warned the readers of that very consistent (?) journal to accept with a grain of salt, the statement telegraphed to the Winnipeg journals that the full text of the round robin to His Honor Lieut.-Governor Masson of Quebec had been published. To set at rest the anxiety of this doubting Thomas, and in order to enlighten his somewhat vague knowledge of precedents THE TIMES herewith publishes the full text of the document, to which is attached the signatures of thirty-five of the members elect, exclusive of the name of Mr. DEMERS, of Iberville, whose sudden death was so generally regretted, after his election by acclamation, and whose successor will be a staunch Liberal; as well as the name of Dr. CAMERON, of Huntingdon, who has assured Mr. MERCIER of his cordial support on the general policy advocated by that gentleman. This will give the present opposition complete control of the new House with the certainty that the majority will increase. It will be observed that the authenticity of the document is guaranteed by the attestations of several well known prominent English and French residents of Montreal. To the muddler on precedents of our ancient contemporary we commend the following for his perusal:

The undersigned certify:

1st. That to put an end to the doubts which contradicting statements in the newspapers may have raised in the public mind concerning the real result of the general elections in this province held on the 14th inst., they have examined with care certain documents of which the Hon. Mr Mercier is the depositary, and by which a majority of the newly elected members of the provincial assembly define their position.

2nd. That they have ascertained that those documents declare that the members who have signed them have no confidence in the Ross government, and pledge themselves to vote for its overthrow.

3rd. That the said documents are signed by thirty-five members who are as follows: Messrs.

THE Queen's partiality for her Scotch subjects, especially the Highlanders, has been often a subject of remark, and it is evident that the regard for the Sovereign is heartily reciprocated by the people. The latest evidence of this sentiment is shown in the translation of the Queen's book, "More Leaves from the Journal of a Life in the Highlands," into the Gaelic language by Her Majesty's command. It is the Queen's desire that the Highlanders should be able to read in their own language her appreciation of them as a patriotic, faithful and brave people, and she therefore commissioned Mrs. MARY MACKELLAR to undertake the work. Mrs. MACKELLAR is known to Celtic scholars and to many others as one of the most attractive writers of Gaelic poetry, and a credit to her race and sex. Her translation of the Queen's book is said to be marked by that elegance and clearness of diction which distinguishes her other literary labors. To those in Canada who may wish to obtain a copy of the work, and there are many doubtless who would like to, a supply has been forwarded to Messrs. DRYSDALE & Co., Montreal, from whom it can be purchased.

THE Montreal Gazette publishes an analysis of the vote cast in the recent Quebec election, showing that the Conservatives carried the Provinces on the "Popular vote," as did the Opposition in British Columbia, the government of which Province is aptly styled that of the minority.

JOURNALISM AND POLITICS.

In a recent issue thus discourseth the San Francisco Bulletin on "Newspaper Ethics": The subject of journalists going into politics, or politicians going into journalism, is one that will bear a little further elucidation. It is natural, on the one hand, that a journalist who, in the fulfillment of his daily duties becomes familiar with the political issues of the day, should conceive himself fitted to make history as well as to record it, and, on the other hand, that a politician who sees his motives misconstrued and his conduct misrepresented by newspapers of the opposite faith should sigh for an organ of his own to set him right with the public. Hence, we see journalists running for Congress and politicians starting newspapers. But it is quite remarkable now uniformly, in this country at least, the experiment fails. The editor seldom makes a useful Congressman, and the Congressman is sure to make a poor journal, which will not pay expenses. The fact is, the two trades are distinct and separate, and require a different set of qualities. And not only this. The moment a newspaper is known to be the organ of an individual, it ceases to possess any power to help its owner, and on the other hand, the moment a politician becomes known as the owner of a newspaper he is held responsible for all that it contains, though he may not even read it. The newspaper hurts him and he hurts the newspaper. We have had some remarkable examples. Henry J. Raymond was one of the brightest men and ablest editors this country ever produced, but he was a failure in Congress. Greeley, who led more minds in his Tribune than any other American journalist of his day, was worse than a failure; he was ridiculous. Watterson, the able leader of his party in his State, cut a poor figure in Washington, and had to be retired. Pulitzer of the World was a nonentity, and was compelled to resign his seat before he had been three months in Congress. Mc Lean of Cincinnati has made and unmade Senators and Congressmen; but whenever he tried to enter the paradise of which he kept the key the door has been shut in his face. It is almost an unwritten law that a newspaper proprietor shall not go to Congress. Of course, thus far we have been speaking only of professional journalists who indulged in political ambition, and of men with an established position in politics who desired to have a newspaper to defend them when they were attacked. We have made no reference to that class of individuals who having no position either in journalism or in politics, delude themselves with the idea that by starting a newspaper and paying its monthly loss, they can buy a political position. This class is larger in France then here. France is full of rich men who are ambitious. It is the commonest thing in the world for political parvenus to start a paper to puff them. But it never answers. There is not a single instance of a Frenchman rising to political station through the influence of a newspaper which he owned. On the contrary, the owner is always held responsible for the paper; when it blunders, as all newspapers do, he is taken to task, and he is lucky if he is not made so ridiculous by the jibes of other newspapers that he has to abandon public life and journalism together. The profession of journalism is high and noble. There can be no loftier aim for a citizen than to devote his energies to trying, modestly and cautiously, to direct public opinion: to check it when is goes too fast, to spur it when it hangs back; to endeavor, with becoming deference, to to show its readers how to discriminate between fleeting delusions and abiding truths. But these duties demand disinterested devotion to public good. They are wholly inconsistent with the sordid impulses which prompt one man to run a newspaper to feed his grudges, and another man to do the like to foist himself into office. Such men neither accomplish the base ends which they have in view, nor in the long run can they establish journals which can be prosperous or respected.

EASTERN EUROPE'S TROUBLE.

The Bulgarians of late have become more intractable than ever. This becomes apparent on a perusal of the opinions of the leading spirits forming their Sobranje, or National Assembly, for neither the threats of General KALBAURS the Russian envoy nor the interposition of the Porte's representative on the Czar's behalf, have prevailed on the provisional government to postpone the election of a prince or suspend the courts martial charged with the trial of the kidnappers. Withing a few days now we shall know how far Russia means to go in the enforcement of her will upon a free and sturdy people, and what pledges of help Bulgaria has receivel from other powers. The declaration made through Gen. KAULBARS that Russia will treat the proceedings of the Sobranje as null and void having been disregarded by the Bulgarian government, the next move would naturally be for the Czar's Foreign Minister to make known by a circular to the powers his master's conviction that active measures should be taken to bring about a more satisfactory state of things. That Austria will resolutely oppose a Russian occupation of Bulgaria has been taken for granted ever since the speech of HERR TISZA in the Hungarian Diet. Still it must be owned that no very definite assurance to the same effect has yet been elicited from TISZA's official superior, Count KALNOKY, the Minister of Foreign Affairs for both moieties of the HAPSBURG dual monarchy. But KALNOKY's position has been for some time insecure, his notorious subserviency to Russia and antipathy to BISMARCK having alienated almost every element of the Austro-Hungarian population. As to the position which the empire ought to take in the Bulgarian affair, Poles, Magyars, Germans, and Austrian Slavs—in a word, all the subjects of FRANCIS JOSEPH are agreed; and the first unequivocal attempt of KALNOKY to thwart their determination to give Austria an outlet on the Ægean would cause his immediate removal from office. It is, indeed, incredible that a merely provisional government like the Bulgarian Regency should so stubbornly resist the pressure of a great power like Russia unless it had the most explicit and trustworthy promises of support from Vienna and Bucharest. The large Russian army collected in Bessarabia would intimidate STAMBULOFF and his colleagues if they had not good reason to believe that the Czar's soldiers would have to vanquish the combination forces of Austria and Roumania before they could reach Tirnova and Sophia. With such assurances from Austria, their high-spirited attitude becomes perfectly intelligible. Upon any other theory their defiant treatment of KAULBARS would be an act of lunacy. The attempt to avert the intervention of England on Austria's side in the Bulgarian business by challenging her right to prolong any further the occupation of Egypt will undoubtedly miscarry, because BISMARCK will discourage it. The German Chancellor has repeatedly advised the British Government to transform their provisional administration of the Nile land into a formal annexation, and he is not likely to reverse his position at this time for the sake of enhancing the prestige of France, not greatly increasing the influence of that country in the Mediterranean. It suits BISMARCK well enough to have the Paris newspapers revile the English and labor to estrange the only friends that the French possess in Europe—we say the only friends, because an alliance between a democratic republic and an autocracy like Russia would be an unnatural and short-lived combination. But, although the Sphinx of Varzin may hold his peace until the English people have been thoroughly exasperated by the French proposal to steal the Nile country after having refused to fight for it, we may be sure that in the end he will favor a British rather than a Gallic occupation of Egypt. So the hands of England will be left free to act in Bulgaria and on the Bosporus as her interest shall obviously prompt her.

DON'T WANT THEM.

The Toronto News is of the opinion that the Hamilton Times is an able exponent of, and a firm believer in the principles of free trade, even to the extent that it is quite willing to allow the products of convict cheap labor to come into the country free and compete with those of our own workmen. It, however, draws the line at English orphans, and objects to the well meant but misdirected efforts of such philanthropists as Dr. BERNARDO and Miss RYE in bringing to our country these children, whose presence in such large numbers decrease the chances of our own poor to obtain employment and make a living. It suggests that the relief for this state of things lies with the English people, and in support of this view says:

"England is a wealthy country, and there is something about the institutions maintained in that country which has the effect of concentrating wealth in few hands. There are men in England who get each year, from some source, as much as $500,000—enough to keep 1000 families in comfort. Do the happy receivers of these immense incomes earn what they get? We take leave to doubt it. We incline to the opinion that the laws of the country, made by the rich to discriminate in their favor, rob the poor of a portion of their earnings in order that the rich may have more than enough." Now if England wants to show her charity—if the desire for the amelioration of the condition of the poor is really sincere—why not exercise that charity at home by so reforming the land laws and the system of taxation that the poor may be permitted to keep all, or nearly all, that they earn, instead of handing over the bulk of their earnings as tribute to the non-producing landed aristocracy?"

Morally, England and even other country should be obliged to keep at home its native poor when any other country closes its ports against them. It is the conviction of THE TIMES that Canada has no need for any immigrants except those which are reasonably independent and can add their quota to the general prosperity. The whole system of assisted passages has time and again been proven to be a weakness to the country. Both political parties now recognize this, and ere long we may reasonably expect to see it shortly abolished. But what will JOHN BULL think if Canadians tell him to keep at home his undesirable surplus of paupers? That irascible old gentleman has been so long in the habit of shipping to the colonies his plethora of population that he will scarcely brook any interference with his favorite plans. And then, to think that this should come from "colonials!" who are of little account in his estimation, and only fit to cherish his offspring cast from his shores by oppressive laws and institutions, which foster on the one hand great wealth and on the other extreme poverty. The Times fancies that Canada's assertion of her right to do as she pleases in any matter which will not conflict with her constitutional position will have an immense influence in creating a national sentiment, and will at the same time be an important step towards that greater one when she will demand her complete independence. She is looking that way now.

MONTREAL EAST, where Attorney-General Taillon was defeated the other day, is usually a straight TORY constituency. It was long represented by Sir George CARTIER, and when he was at last defeated there, RIEL, who had been nominated for Provencher, Man., resigned in his favor, and was afterwards repaid with public money secretly conveyed to him by Sir John MACDONALD. The Tory leader, when in need of a supporter, has never been very scrupulous about how he obtains him.

FORCED APART.

BY W. CLARK RUSSELL.

Author of the "Wreck of the Grosvenor," "A Sailor's Sweetheart," &c.

Some of that put it aside with a movement of her hand.

"You know if it be right w' thee," said she; "but the ring's only worth what it 'ud fetch as gold."

Something in these words, something in the irrepressible leer that weighted the old woman's eyelids, took Jenny's breath away. And then instantaneously there flashed upon her the sense and knowledge of the false and fearful position she was placed in by her husband's disappearance.

She started to her feet.

"Oh, Mrs. Mead!" she half shrieked through her pale lips, "is it possible that my words will not be believed? Great God! will it be thought that I am not Cuthbert Shaw's wife?"

"But the ring's only worth what it 'ud fetch as gold."

And then recalling her father's iron nature, and his hard rejection of unsupported words, and his evil, unsparing habit of thinking the worst, her heart seemed to stand still, and she remained motionless and frozen, with her hands locked and her teeth clinched.

"Sit down, my dear, sit down, and do not run clans daft, for there's nothing heavy the matter yet," creaked the old woman, again inspecting Jenny closely, motioning her the while to be seated by arching her hands out of her shoulders like a rabbit's paws. "If he's your sweetheart, ye must have some faith in him, and maybe he'll be turning up in a day or two, and then the laugh'll be on thy side. Do ye hear?"

"He is my husband," said Jenny, in a sobbing whisper, breathing quickly.

"Well, well, husband or sweetheart, if he comes he'll be welcome, won't he now, dearie?"

"My husband!" shrieked the girl, with a wild stamp of the foot. "Will it not be believed?"

"Why, to be sure it will. But see. I'm an old, lorn woman, who knows the world as thy father knows the Bible—all the harm of it, my dear; and if you was my child, this would I say—hold thy peace about your marriage until you can show proof, that Satan himself wouldn't doubt, that young Mr. Shaw is thy husband. What! will you make enemies of the church where I was married, and I have no bit o' paper (the Lord knows what them things are called) to prove that Mr. Shaw is my husband, and 'tis the truth as it that never a living crature, my own sister not excepting, knew that I was Shaw's w, 'twuntil this blessed day, when my husband hath left me to give the news o' my marriage alone."

She ceased, leering shrewdly, with a forefinger aga'nst her nose.

The stunned look that had settled upon Jenny's face while the old woman was speaking passed in a moment or two after she ceased, and a strange and striking character was given to her beauty by an expression which it seems absurd to describe as a mingling of despair and determination, yet which assuredly suggested both these qualities.

"I see that a great trouble has come upon me; but in the sight of God my heart is pure," she said in a low but steady voice. "Mrs. Mead speak to me honestly and tell me what you think has become of my husband."

"My honesty won't ease you, my dear, and the Lord knows I may be wrong, though folks think that it's the devil as gives me wisdom," said the old woman, showing her fangs with a grin of ill-dissembled triumph; for in her own mind she had no doubt of the motive of Cuthbert's disappearance, and was flattered with the facile mastery that put her far ahead of the town's surmises.

"Pray answer me. I have the heart to listen to anything now, Mrs. Mead."

"Well," exclaimed Mrs. Mead, speaking slowly, intermitting her words for the sake of filling the spaces between with deliberate nods and shakes of the head, "they'll be thinking this of thee—that you are not married, and that Mr. Shaw hath left you to bear your shame alone. They'll argey that the 'ou of th' old popinjay up at the schoolhouse 'ud never match with Mike Strangfield's darter, and that he hath ruined 'ee with promises. And maybe they'll say that th' old doctor's in the secret, and hath got his son away slyly to save him from the deacon, unless you shall defeat the liars by sure proof of thy marriage, and that you must get about quickly."

Jenny stood looking at her with a steady, vacant gaze, as though she did not heed what was being said, and, with the same absent manner, was moving toward the door.

"How shall you get about it, dearie? You do not ask?"

"How!" exclaimed the girl, pausing. "If my husband does not come to me, I am quite helpless."

"Why, who should help 'ee but thy father! Let him go to work. He hath money and strength. If I was his wife he'd not sit idly cursing."

And at the notion of the deacon cursing, she set up a creaking laugh. But such advice was bad instead of life to the poor heart that heard it.

"Good-by, Mrs. Mead," said she, "if you have news to comfort me, you will not keep me waiting for it?"

"Trust me! I'll do my best. But I'll not come anear thy house, though I had young Mr. Shaw in my arms. I'm none so dear to the deacon but that he'd bile me in his pitch kettle, could he find a reason for murderin' me in the Bible. As to my mammy—But there, lass, heart! if I have good news you shall have it quickly."

CHAPTER XVI.

HER FATHER-IN-LAW.

Her face like marble, but with no lack of determination in it, Jenny walked down the grimy court and crossed the market place. She halted a moment to deliberate which way she should take to Greystone school. She chose the way of the sands, and down to the beach she went, with drooping head and frightened peeps at the people who passed her; for on her now was crust sense of heavy shame, and the despair that bares the nerves of the heart for the sunshine and human eyes to torture.

Crossing the space of shingle on which lay the fishing boats roasting in the sun, she toiled along the sand toward the ravine which led to Greystone school. When a gap in sight of the schoolhouse the pals of her heart grew smaller, and her feet dragged. To the nervous, modest girl, whose shy spirit all the might and fire of love had scarcely endowed with bravery enough to keep her bold in secret meetings with her own husband—whose coming to him was always a sweet scamper to his heart and breathless concealment there until blushes waned under kisses, and courage rose to whispers—thoughts of an interview with the haughty little doctor, whose fiery prejudice had earned him hate and fame among the sect she belonged to—who had held her own Cuthbert in awe and was always named by him with fear—was terrifying, indeed.

But, then, what would become of her if she had not spirit to push her quest into the presence of the one man who could, if he chose (as she believed), give her more information concerning her husband than all the rest of the town put together? Bravely she stepped forward under a supporting impulse, and walked firmly to the door of the house.

COLONIAL RACE OF NEW YORK

What Has Become of It?—The Colonial Descendant and the Immigrant.

The question arises, what has become of the once active colonial race—descendants of Batavian and Anglo-Saxon—who so ardently sought their chartered privileges under Governor Dongan, and, finally, were among the first to assert their right to them, in arms? The Bavarian, the Anglo-Saxon, the French and other nationalities that colonized the city have disappeared under climatic influences and race admixture; and although the Anglo-Saxon is the controlling parental stock, a distinct colonial type has resulted. The type, according to many observers, is fast disappearing, or is still in the throes of acclimatization, there not having been sufficient endurance in it to reach the state of renaturalization.

The characteristics of the colonial race, as continued to our day, distinguish the present colonial New Yorker of three or four generations' descent from the colonial Anglo-Saxon ancestor, as much as the latter is distinct from the Latin races. Such deviation is apparent in the physical, mental, and, perhaps, moral attribute of the new race, and also in its lingual expression. It requires but a glance to distinguish the colonial descendant, physically, from the race ancestors. The neck has become elongated, the hair is darker and straighter, the bones are smaller, the jaws, or jowls, have become contracted, the normal pulse is quicker, the voice higher, the complexion dry and pale; and, above all, the power of nourishing the species has materially diminished. So pronounced are these changes that there are anthropologists who consider them signs of race degradation and of an approaching extinction, which can only be prevented by continual admixture from more robust sources. If the purity of a race blood is essential to natural bodily and mental vigor, as some contend, than the dominance of the New Englander, through a more pure Anglo-Saxon descent, may be cited as an example.

Under the small increase in the numbers of the descendants of the original settlers, the city of New York is practically in the hands of others, and the ancient colonial element is being rapidly eliminated, or, at least, has lost prominence. The city of New York is now indirectly, if not directly, ruled by immigrants or the sons of immigrants. While the invasion of New England thrift and pertinacity have placed the New Englander comparatively at the head of its commercial, and of very much of its professional life, those of immediate Irish blood are practically the political power. It is natural that the foreign element should keep rule, if they have the enterprise to grasp it, and when the door is left wide open; and the descendants of the ancient inhabitants must often bear the rule, even, at times, of those morally unfit for power, if they are unwilling or unable to contend with the more aggressive races.—J. W. Gerard in Magazine of American History.

He Revolutionized Theatrical Advertising.

One would hardly believe that the this, quiet man with the blonde mustache one saw last week lingering lounglngly outside of the Standard was Jack Haverly, whose lithograph used to glare from every dead wall in the United States, and who used to coin money and spend it as fast. But it was. Haverly revolutionized theatrical advertising, and raised up an industry that is now one of the largest in the United States. He was the first to develop lithographing on the scale of enterprise, and since that time the millions of dollars put into that kind of advertising explains why, out of enormous receipts at the theatres of the country in the past ten years, managers have made nothing. If Haverly had stuck to minstrels he would have had an enormous fortune.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Put Policemen in the Saddle.

A highly valued subscriber, who has spent his life in the army, suggests that there is urgent need of teaching the police of great cities to ride horses. Accoutrements should be kept at the stations, and each officer should have his saddle, blanket, bridle, sabre and pistol belt. These things should be inspected, and be always ready for use at an instant's notice. It is the opinion of our correspondent that all the horses of the city should be at the disposal of the police in times of great civil commotion.—The Current.

France Not a Commercial Nation.

The truth is that France is not intrinsically a commercial nation; it is an artistic one. The natural genius of the French runs to writing novels, painting pictures, composing music and not to driving bargains. Here, contrary to the rule that holds in America, commerce is not an end in itself; it is simply a means to the enjoyment of life. Here art is—as it ought to be everywhere—the summit of the people's aspirations.—Chicago Times.

Machine for Scaring the Timid.

The bad little boy of Rome, N. Y., has invented a machine for scaring timid persons that he says "knocks the window up a tack silly." When night has come and everything is shrouded in gloom he quietly inserts the hook of a common shoe buttoner under a clapboard of a neighbor's house, ties a strong cord to the handle of the buttoner, and then, drawing the string tight, rubs it with a piece of rosin. The horrible rumbling and shaking and groaning that follow scare the inmates of the house and delight the bad boy.—Chicago Times.

—The entertainment given by the school pupils of Victoria on Thursday evening was like that of Wednesday evening, a decided success. The proceeds from the two entertainments will wipe out the indebtedness on the school for the prize fund and leave a very respectable balance as the nucleus of another fund. The teachers are to be congratulated on the success attending their efforts and the pupils on the creditable manner in which they acted their respective parts, as well as the outsiders who rendered their assistance.

—This morning's Colonist contains a lengthy interview with its editor while in Toronto which appeared in the Mail. That individual neither misses a chance nor lets an opportunity pass to magnify his own greatness and importance. How the benighted denizens of Toronto must have felt when they beheld our editor-school trustee-councillor-member of the local legislature and cabinet minister in expectancy as his pompus form paraded its well paved streets! One very important omission was made, that of a reference to the Edgar baby episode. Many are wondering if James and David met; and if so, how the pair would have laughed at the admirable manner in which they had bamboozled the people of this fair province. It is evident that the editor now in the east enjoying a well earned holiday was specially created to be an immigration agent. Wonder if the government will create a bureau for his benefit?

We are constantly receiving the latest SHEET MUSIC and MUSIC BOOKS.

FROM ALASKA.

Arrival of the Idaho This Forenoon—Latest News.

The Idaho left Juneau, Alaska, on Monday last, and arrived in Victoria at 9 a. m. to-day. Among her passengers were the following gentlemen: Judge Dawson, District Judge of the territory; Mr. Clark, barrister, and Capt. Cowles, from Sitka; Mr. N. Sylves, from the Yukon; Messrs. G. Hardrider, H. Coones, M. Gibbins, C. Martin, and W. Murdock, from Juneau; Messrs. O. Wilson and A. Cameron from Cassiar.

James Cain, a well known British Columbian, who had been in the Yukon country during last season, died at Juneau about the 20th of last month from dropsy.

Mining in the basin has been fairly successful during the season notwithstanding the backward spring, several companies having taken out considerable gold, notably Campbell, Coones & Co., who made about $20,000. The outlook for quartz is encouraging, and several new discoveries have been made of excellent quartz at Farmer's Bay, about 40 miles north of Douglas Island. Several of the assays have gone into the thousands. Large deposits of low grade ore similar to the celebrated Treadwell mine on Douglas Island have been found. Several miners have worked placer diggings at that place with some success, two men having cleaned up $1500 under unfavorable circumstances.

The Treadwell mill on Douglas Island is running night and day and turning out a great deal of bullion. It is expected that at least two mills more of a like capacity will be in operation during the ensuing season. Altogether the outlook for Alaska is bright.

A FINE COMPANY COMING.

Next Thursday evening Miss Georgie Woodthorpe, supported by a splendid dramatic company of fifteen people, will commence an engagement of three nights at the Victoria Theatre. Miss Woodthorpe comes to us endorsed by the entire press of the northwest, wherever she has appeared. Her company is composed of the principal members of the late Miss Jeffreys Lewis company, and is pronounced by the Portland press, as a support, far above the average. Miss Woodthorpe will open in "May Blossom," or a "Fisherman's Daughter." Her production of this play in Portland last week was a very successful one. The Oregonian of Tuesday says: "Certainly a more satisfied audience could not have been gathered in a house of amusement than that which witnessed 'May Blossom' by the Georgie Woodthorpe Company last evening. It was as smooth and well-ballanced a performance as one cares to see," etc. This is certainly a high recommendation, and an attraction that deserves such a notice from any first-class journal will certainly crowd our theatre.

GRANITE CITY.

A letter received by the Inland Sentinel from Granite City says: "There is considerable mining going on here, notwithstanding the existing depression. The benches along Granite creek have all been taken up and some of them are paying very well. This camp will give employment to three or four hundred miners for years to come. There has been comparatively speaking, very little prospecting done outside of Granite and a few other streams where gold was known to exist in paying quantities. Mr Geo. C. Tunstall, our popular and efficient government officer, has gone to bring in the Indian murderer George now in custody. We understand Mr. Tunstall is to be stationed as Stipendiary Magistrate for Nicola, the coming winter. We are sorry to part with him, even for a short time."

GREAT DEBATING EVENT.

The Union Debating society will meet on Wednesday evening next at their hall on Quadra street. The event is a great one, for the subject to be debated is one bristling with stubborn facts to be handled by powerful orators and debaters. The subject is: "Which is the more destructive, fire or water"? Willis Bond will essay to prove to the audience that fire is the more destructive and has such a mass of facts relating thereto that he is confident of routing the enemy. Mr. Hall will combat his arguments by impressing clearly on his hearers that water "takes the cake" as a more destructive element. The public are cordially invited.

BROTHER SCOTS.

The annual meeting of the St. Andrew's and Caledonian Society was held on Friday night, when the following officers were elected: President, Capt. J. Irving; First Vice-President, Wm. Lorimer (re-elected); Second Vice-President, John Robertson; Treasurer, Donald McKay (re-elected); Secretary, Robt. Mitchell; Assistant Secretary, A. Grieves; Chaplain, Rev. R. Stephen; Physician, Dr. Milne; Directors, Thos. Russell, James Burns, A. J. Smith, Jas. Hutcheson, A. Allan, W. A. Robertson, W. C. Geddes; Wardens, Thos. Gorrie, and Thos. Innes; Piper, D. Kennedy; Bard, J. Deans. The date of the annual dinner was fixed for the 30th November.

BUSINESS IN ENGLAND.

A correspondent in Liverpool, writing to a relative in this city, says commerce in Liverpool is very quiet. This horrid Bulgarian trouble makes it worse. The state of Ireland seems to be improving. Gen. Sir Redvers Buller is a first-class man to settle the moonlighters. The correspondent predicts a financial failure for the Liverpool exhibition. The Mayor of that town he considers the wrong man to be at the head of such an affair. The exhibition was run on too costly a scale, and an investigation is demanded.

LOOKING FOR INVESTMENTS.

Dr. George T. Orton, M. P. Centre Wellington, Dr. Campbell, of Denver, Colorado, and G. B. Wright, Esq., have recently visited the Nicola Milling and Mining Company's property, and made an examination of theore, work done and the locality. Dr. Orton is interested in mining at Big Bend, Kootenay, etc., and Dr. Campbell represents capitalists that are inclined, if prospects warrant, to establish a reducing mill somewhere along the line of the C. P. Railway, wherever most convenient for shipping purposes.

FENSON'S MILLS, NICOLA.

Marks, Rutledge & Co. and Henry Woodward have bought Geo. Fenson's mill property, at Nicola, consisting of grist mill, saw mill, all the houses thereon and a thousand acres of good land. The whole property is worth $18,000. It is said that it is a good purchase.

POLICE COURT.

Wm. Blee and Jos. Warren, shooting tame geese; remanded until Tuesday.

A. Lawson, driving across James Bay Bridge at a pace faster than a walk; adjourned until Monday.

George, alias Ah Shing, charged with stealing three hand saws. The prisoner was seen last night on Yates street, by Mr. W. H. Ellis, of the Colonist, walking hurriedly away with something under his coat. The editor gave chase, and the Celestial in running dropped three hand saws, and when captured was turned over to Officer Parsons, who took him to gaol. The saws were identified by W. H. Burkholder, who proved that they had been taken from his workshop on Broad street, near the Arcade. Ah Shing is an old offender, having only lately come out of gaol after a three months term. He was sent back again for another three months at hard labor, and when informed by Policeman Smith of the sentence, exclaimed "All right," and appeared perfectly satisfied. The saws were returned to the owners—two belonging to Mr. Burkholder and one to a man in his employ.

MARINE ITEMS.

The steamer Idaho arrived from Alaska this forenoon and left for Port Townsend and Portland in the afternoon.

The Queen of the Pacific sailed for San Francisco at 1 p. m. to-day.

Nothing has been heard of the Sardonyx for over two weeks, which is not pleasant to contemplate.

The schooner Active arrived from the west coast to-day.

CONSIGNEES.

Per Princess Louise from Burrard Inlet: Dom Ex Co, A Heaney, S J Pitts, T N Henderson, M & Brown, Mrs C Pope, H Bornstein, Miss L Bornstein.

Per North Pacific from the Sound: A G Horne & Son, A Johnson, A Ofner, D B Grant, D McPherson, Fell & Co, F W Foster, Henderson Bros, J Rausseau, J Gosnell, J Cunningham, J Wilson, Kelly Bros, Nanaimo E P Soc, Rowbotham & Co, A Cowan, T Earle, Neufelder & R, T C Jackson, S Leiser, S J Pitts, W Eckert, N Portman, J Levy, H Tibbals.

LAST NIGHT'S DANCES.

The Orangemen of this city gave a delightful hop last evening in Harmony Hall. The affair was select and not too largely attended; just enough to make dancing comfortable. The members of the order wore their regalia which gave a pleasing effect to the scene. At midnight an excellent supper was served and dancing was indulged in till 2 o'clock this morning. Prof. Haynes furnished the music.

The American Club held their first hop in the Theatre Comique last night also. The affair was very largely attended and much merriment was indulged in. Dancing was continued in till 2.30 this morning, when the affair broke up and all retired after a pleasant and enjoyable evening. The Queen City Quintette furnished the music. Several irregularities that existed last night could be remedied for a future occasion.

FOR SAN FRANCISCO.

The following passengers left for San Francisco at 1 p. m. to-day on the Queen of the Pacific: J Scott, C Clew, G R Reid, Mrs W H Cummings, Miss A C Cummings, W H Cummings, W R Smith, Thos Riley, C E King, Mrs T L Scott and two children, A J McLellan and wife, Miss Lucy McKinnon, Miss Case, Mrs Croghan and two children, Dr John Scott, Wm Allen, Rev W A White, Mrs W A White, H A White, E W McLean, C Armstrong, Charles Wiltbington, Fred Hussey, R Heath, L N McQuestin, Jerry Bertrand, D Sovereign, Mrs. Finney and four children. Thirty in the steerage.

INSANE.

The man Barney McCaffery, who is confined in gaol, is no doubt insane. He is an old resident of the province and until recently was a night watchman on the C. P. R. at Cisco. It was in this neighborhood that Holloway, also a watchman on the road, was shot, and the circumstances of the crime are very likely preying upon McCaffrey's mind. He is known as a quiet, inoffensive man, who would do no harm to anybody. He will probably be sent to the insane asylum.

A RELEASED CAPTAIN.

Capt. Rainier, of the American sealing schooner San Diego, who has been confined in prison at Sitka for some time past, arrived down on the Idaho to-day.
